2002—2010 the Infinity House was opened as a family violence and homelessness shelter for aboriginal women. 2010 - the Central Urban Metis Federation Inc. decided to restructure the Infinity House as a supportive living home for high risk Mothers. Our supportive living homes have self-contained suites and independent living for single Aboriginal women with children who are experiencing social and economic challenges. Infinity House consists of four emergency suites, ten long-term suites and one resource room/counseling office. Support programs and services are offered to the residents/clients of Infinity House to assist the women in healthy lifestyle choices and achieving self-sufficiency. Initially, the continuum of housing supports was designed to assist residents/clients of Infinity House to gain independence and experience a better quality of life.
